Koren Specific Technique Seminar

Presented by: Ted Koren, D.C.

Simply put, you'll know exactly where to adjust (without X-rays, computers, MRI or other analytical equipment), when to adjust and whether or not you have corrected the subluxation; you cannot over-adjust.

You'll see real changes from the first visit including immediate postural changes. You won't be pounding on the same subluxations visit after visit. Spines start healing and people start holding their adjustment for longer periods – and they refer more than ever.

I knew this technique was powerful when I saw dramatic retracing in patients – both mental and physical stresses were being released.

Additional benefits:

- This is a stand alone technique – but you can use it with other techniques if you wish.
- There is no guess work – you will know if the subluxation was corrected. You will know where, when and when not to adjust.

- It's easy to learn.
- Yes, you really can specifically analyze and adjust yourself.
